Senior Class History

As freshmen we had for our officers Mary Eakes, president; Charles Clark, vice-president; Maude West, secretary; and Lillian Abee, treasurer. The sophomores and upper-classmen easily succeeded in making us realize our ignorance and undesirability. Edward Conway represented our class by singing a tenor solo at the annual North Carolina Music Contest in Greensboro.

William Ellers, president; Charles Gaskins, vice-president; and Quinn Bostic, secretary-treasurer represented our class during the sophomore year. As newly sophomores we proudly felt that we were promising young students. At least we weren't green freshmen anymore. This year our representatives at Greensboro were Vernon Tyson in the changed voice solo and Edward Conway in the baritone solo. The '34 marshalls from the sophomore class were Rosa Lee McGowan, Ray Minges, John Williams, and Ernestine Hobgood.

Junior class officers were Charles Clark, president; J. A. Joyner, vice-president; Robert Musselwhite, secretary; and Iris Hooker, treasurer. The '36 marshalls from our class were Rosa Lee McGowan, Louise Saieed, Bobby Baublitz, Elizabeth Holliday, Lillian Abee, Helen Settle, Ernestine Hobgood, and Pauline Abeyounis.

George Lautares as president of the senior class has been our guiding star. Those who have aided him officially are John Wells, vice-president; Robert Musselwhite, secretary; Charles Gaskins, treasurer; and Vernon Tyson, reporter. The major dramatic productions of the year in which the seniors played a part were "The Count and the Co-Ed," "The Mikado," and "You Can't Beat the Irish." The girl's and boy's basketball squads included many seniors, as did every other major sport. The department of journalism would have been impossible without the aid of a dozen indefatigable seniors.

It's time for your hankies. The moment for parting has come. But besides a tinge of sadness in our make-up there is also a thrill of anticipation as the class of '37 launches into broader experiences.

Last Will and Testament

We, the members of the graduating class of nineteen thirty-seven, who, after four years of irksome slavery, see our happy end drawing near, being of sound mind and clear judgment, do hereby bequeath all our worldly possessions, moral virtues, and intellectual attainments to those most in need of them.

Article 1. We bequeath to Mr. Junius H. Rose our appreciation for his guidance and interest in us for the past four years.

Article 2. To Mr. Vester Moye Mulholland we leave an application blank to the National Society for Batchelors; or maybe it would be better to leave him an E. B.

Article 3. To Nina Smith, Lillian Abee leaves her ability and love for dancing.

Article 4. We leave to Thomas Swain, Charles Gaskins' love for Jane Rowlette.

Article 5. To Clara Dudley, Mable Beaman leaves her splendid posture and the soprano solo.

Article 6. To Jack Moye we leave Jack Forbes' old-age pension.

Article 7. Virginia Bradshaw bequeaths her flirting ability and bottle of peroxide to Ruby Grant.

Article 8. The senior class leaves to Lib Gates its best wishes for success in her struggle with DuBose.

Article 9. To Mrs. Cooper's Fanny we leave a ball of "string."

Article 10. To all lovers we leave the cafeteria steps.

Article 11. Ricks Mann leaves his position as traffic cop at E. C. T. C. to Ray ("Screw") Munford.

Article 12. To Howard Hodges and Myra Blount we leave a referee to settle all their future quarrels.

Article 13. Carl Pierce leaves his athletic prowess to Booger Scales.

Article 14. Jack Forbes leaves Earl Hellen his personal lawn mower with which to trim nature's fuzz.

Article 15. To Thornton Ryan we leave our debts for "Reader's Digest."

Article 16. To Quinn Bostic we leave a "Fuller-Brush" hair cut.

Article 17. Charles Gaskins leaves his "nights-off" at the Golden Leaf to Fred Carrico, with the earnest desire that he, too, may become a smoothy.

Article 18. To Bobby Hollar, George Clark leaves his dancing ability.

Article 19. To Baxter Clark and Alice Blow, Billy Whitehurst and Miriam James leave their definition of love.

Article 20. Ernestine Hobgood bequeaths her latest novel "The Bookworm Turns," to Emmy Lou Scales.

Article 21. Vernon Tyson leaves Dorothy Brinkley—with regrets.

Article 22. Evelyn Tucker leaves to Frances Clark her sincerity and quiet manner.

Article 23. To Miss Louise Taylor, Pauleen Faust leaves her book on "How to Act in Three Easy Lessons."

Article 24. Paul Brooks leaves his timidity to Harold Forbes.

Article 25. To John Wells we leave senior privileges.

Article 26. Miriam James leaves her studious habits to Louis Mayo.

Article 27. To Eleanor Rives, Mary Woolard leaves her dignity and Lib Holliday, her modesty.

Article 28. Mary Eakes leaves her formula for a good personality to Charles Horne and Richey Horton.

Article 29. To Jean Gaskins, Jane Smith bequeaths her sweet disposition.

Article 30. To Miss Mozell Jones we leave "Two Tickets to Georgia."

Article 31. Madoline Woolard bequeaths her ability to "economize" on the New York trip to all C. S. P. A. delegates next year.

Article 32. To Mrs. Herring we leave a sign board for each table with the inscription "Quiet please."

Article 33. To Mr. Bryan we leave our love to keep him warm.

Article 34. To all incoming freshmen we leave our padded cells and crazed prison-keepers.

Article 35. To the remaining students we leave our sympathy.

Article 36. Mary Lorraine Horne leaves her dual disposition to all underclassmen who henceforth get in trouble.

Article 37. James Clark leaves his "broadmindedness" to Tom Skinner.

Article 37. "Pee Wee" Dail leaves his chest expansion to Mary D. Horne.

Article 39. Betty Fleischmann leaves her sparkling eyes and active tongue to Lillian Harris.

Article 40. George Lautares leaves his technique to William Harris.

Article 41. Billy Whitehurst leaves his business ability to Howard Hodges.

Article 42. Ray Minges leaves the farmer's daughter to J. D. Wilson.

Article 43. Edna May Turnage leaves her tactfulness to Baxter Clark.

Article 44. Martin Beach leaves his beak to Howard Harris.

Article 45. John David Bridges leaves his elevated chassis to Earle Hellen.

Article 46. Jack Foley leaves his way with the women to Allen Taylor.

Article 47. To "Eve" Buchanan we leave the "Golden Leaf."

Superlatives

Superlatives! Although there is nothing new in the idea, one still gets a big kick out of reading them and passing them on for moments of light talk and delightful reverie. So here goes!

Class Prophecy

It was last Monday that we newspaper correspondents, who got our start on the staff of "Green Lights," began our wing trip around the world. Our purpose was to visit all our classmates of the class of '37 and write interesting events for our present publication, "The New York Circulator." Our crew was composed of Edna May Turnage, pilot and navigator, Pauleen Faust, photographer, and Ernestine Hobgood, flying correspondent.

"A few nights before we left New York we saw the Ziegfeld Follies featuring Betty Fleischmann and Katherine Davenport. They were de-lovely! Last night we went to the Metropolitan Opera House where we heard Jane Smith in the title role in "Carmen." We enjoyed seeing the Yankees play the Athletics yesterday afternoon because Jack Forbes was playing centerfield for the Yankees and Derrel Hemby, first base.

Just before we took off for London, we met J. Roy Barker, who was preparing to make a non-stop flight to Alaska to see Madoline Woolard, who is having the time of her life "gold digging."

The trip across was full of thrills. Reaching the Croydon airport, we were met by Martin Beach, present Prime Minister of England. He informed us that Mary Woolard was being presented to King George VI that evening. Not being able to get in on this, we motored to Oxford to visit Bernice Ellers, who is coaching football there.

Our next stop was Paris. Here we located Mademoiselle Pauline Abeyounis who is studying French at Sonbonne. On our way to the Louvre to see the masterpieces of Misses Evelyn Tucker and Pat Brooks, we met Billy Whitehurst, French representative of the "New York Herald's" business department.

On the Champs-Elysees we ran into the renowned dress designer, Vivianne Hatem.

In Berlin we inquired at the hospital to see Dr. Bridgers, who has recently made a most successful operation in restoring the eyesight of the dictator of Germany, but he was in conference with several of his assistants.

Taxing down Hitler Strausse we had a collision with a limousine out of which stepped Eleanor House and two young ladies. Eleanor explained to us that she was traveling companion for two well-to-do German girls. Eleanor told us that Mary Donald McLawhorn was teaching trigonometry in the J. H. Rose High School in Greenville.

At 4:30 next morning we flew to Switzerland and nearly met with a very serious accident. It seems that the Swiss ski champion, Mary Lorraine Horne, was attempting a ski jump over the mountains. We met her in mid-air, and our trip continued only after we discovered that she came down first. All down to earth safe and sound, Miss Horne told us that she had just heard from Lillian Abee, who was dancing at the Surf Club at Virginia Beach.

We went boating in Venice, and came near losing our lives when another gondola side-wiped us. The gondolier, an old friend of ours, Gilbert Peele, pulled us aboard and there sat Mildred Langley and Ray Minges—spooning.

Our next stop was Spain. Here we stopped to see a bull-fighter, and the bad and bold Tom Forrest was the center of attraction. We heard from Tom that Ricks Mann was running the Oriental theatre in Chicago and killing pigs in the Chicago stockyard. Tom stopped his bull-fighting long enough to tell us that Virginia Tyndall and Doris Trippe were doing Salvation Army work, and that Catharine Mann was a nun in White Hall Convent. We left for Nigeria the next day.

There we met D. S. Harris and John Williams breaking in their new 1949 ostriches. Edith Harris, who is the Dean of Women at Vassar, was visiting them at the time. Here Louise Saieed was buying Oriental rugs for her New York shoppe.

After flying forever, it seemed, we reached Egypt where we saw the dashing DuBose Simpson crooning to the Sphinx in the moonlight. "Just brushing up on my technique," said DuBose. We visited Charles Gaskins' new manufacturing plant in which he makes champagne-flavored castor oil. Ann Dupree was his business manager.

In Athens, we saw George Lautares in his final championship boxing match. We didn't get to speak to George; he didn't come to until we reached Rumania. Here we saw Marie Simpson and J. A. Joyner in the Olympics. Marie told us that Maude West was head of the knitting department in Macy's in New York, and that Hilda Herring was giving knitting lessons in the same department.

In India, we met Preacher Marvin Gardner, who said that William Forbes was in the army. In China, Thomas Cox, missionary, introduced us to his wife, the former Alma Harris. We also saw Mary Eakes who is visiting her aunt and we got a glimpse of Rosalyn Swindell, hostess on the China Clipper.

Reaching Japan, we bumped into Dorothy Ann Pickelsimer and Earl Dunn riding in a jinrickshaw and eating soup with chopsticks. In Hawaii, we ran across Virginia Bradshaw entertaining a number of friends with the hula-hula. George Clark was host of the party and Mary Elizabeth Peele, was the only guest we knew.

Back to the good ole U. S. A. at last, but not for long. We heard Edward Conway on the radio, the second Dick Powell, and his wife, Lucile Coward. Helen Settle was torch-singer. Elizabeth Holliday is teaching in Miss Jessie Schnopp's nursery school, and we heard that Pearl Barnhill was teaching French at Duke University. Frances Whitley has replaced Martha Raye on the screen, and we visited Miriam James in San Francisco before we left for Mexico.

In Mexico we stopped long enough to see the adventurous Mac Hicks and hear him tell about Tom Cox who is repairing the Panama Canal. In Argentina, Herbert Rogers is running a sheep ranch and Leon Meadows is managing a duck farm. In Peru, we had the world's greatest crystal gazer, Jack Foley to prophesy our future. He had just returned from a tour of the United States and had seen Mabel Beaman, a success in Radio City.

In Rio de Janeiro we saw an interpretation of the Rhumba, presented by Dorothy Teel and Ray Munford. Dorothy gave us news of Louise Hunter, manager of a hat shop in Chicago. Also in Brazil we saw Dorothy Harris, head of a chewing gum factory and she told us about Leslie Garner and Belva Harris, who have taken the place of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine.

We visited a men's clothing shop and saw Junius Goodwin modeling Tarzan leopard skins.

In Bermuda, Christine and Pauline Hicks were deep-sea divers. The twins told us about a recent visit of Edith Allen, tight rope walker, and Beulah Harrington, landscape designer in Florida.

Back to America—this time to stay! Ora Hill has become a successful home economics teacher in Florida. We had word from Nurse Marie Colver that Georgette Saad and Alberta Baker were both married and living in Tennessee.

In Greenville, we visited G. H. S. and saw Prof. Paul Brooks, who has recently taken Mr. Bryan's place, and Eugene Dail who is now printing "Green Lights" in Parks' place. Eugene told us of Vernon Tyson's success as photographer in Norfolk. We regretted to learn that Helen Perkins was in Pitt General Hospital recovering from a broken wrist, hurt while demonstrating her slogan of "Now you're bragging!" While here we read of Margie Spivey's campaigns in Kansas, boosting Melva Stokes for governor of Kansas. Incidentally, Iris Hooker is running for president of the United States.

During our visit to the high school, Mrs. Bowen told us that Carl Pierce was a cowboy in Montana.

On the way back to New York, we stopped at Washington, D. C. to see Robert Musselwhite who has been announcing our flight from the beginning and we learned through him that Rosa Lee McGowan was teaching her favorite pastime, Latin, in Padunk, N. C. We stopped at Joseph Saad's garage to get our motor checked and he told us of Rosalind Tucker's solo flight across the Black Sea.

May all alarm clocks be dashed to pieces and newspapers go to hang—we are going home and get some sleep! And please don't bother us.

Junior Class

The Junior class, composed of one hundred and sixteen members, has been one of the most active groups in high school throughout the year. Under the capable leadership of Joe Staton the class has sponsored a number of dances and one of the best Junior-Senior parties ever given in Greenville High.

A high percentage of the class makes honor grades and belongs to the Beta Club. Two members, Marjorie Sugg and Louis Mayo, made the Aycock Debating team and entered the final competitions in Chapel Hill.

Athletics, music, journalism, and other activities are all well represented by junior students.

Other officers of the class besides President Staton are Baxter Clark, Marjorie Sugg, and Jane Rowlette.

At the present the Junior class is taking the initiative in formulating plans for a student government organization next year.

Mrs. Herbert Utley Miss Corinna Mial, and V. M. Mulholland have been class advisers for the Juniors.

Ninth Grade

Eighth Grade

Class photograph

Seventh Grade

This year for the first time in the history of the Greenville school system a separate junior high school department has been functioning. Mrs. Luther Herring has served as principal of the junior division.

Ninth Grade

Enrolled in the ninth grade are one hundred twenty-six students. Homeroom teachers for this group are Miss Estelle Greene, Miss Deannie Boone Haskett, Robert Sugg Fleming, and Herman Dally. Some of the ninth graders have attempted student government in their homeroom groups, and a large number have been active in the athletic and the music departments of the school.

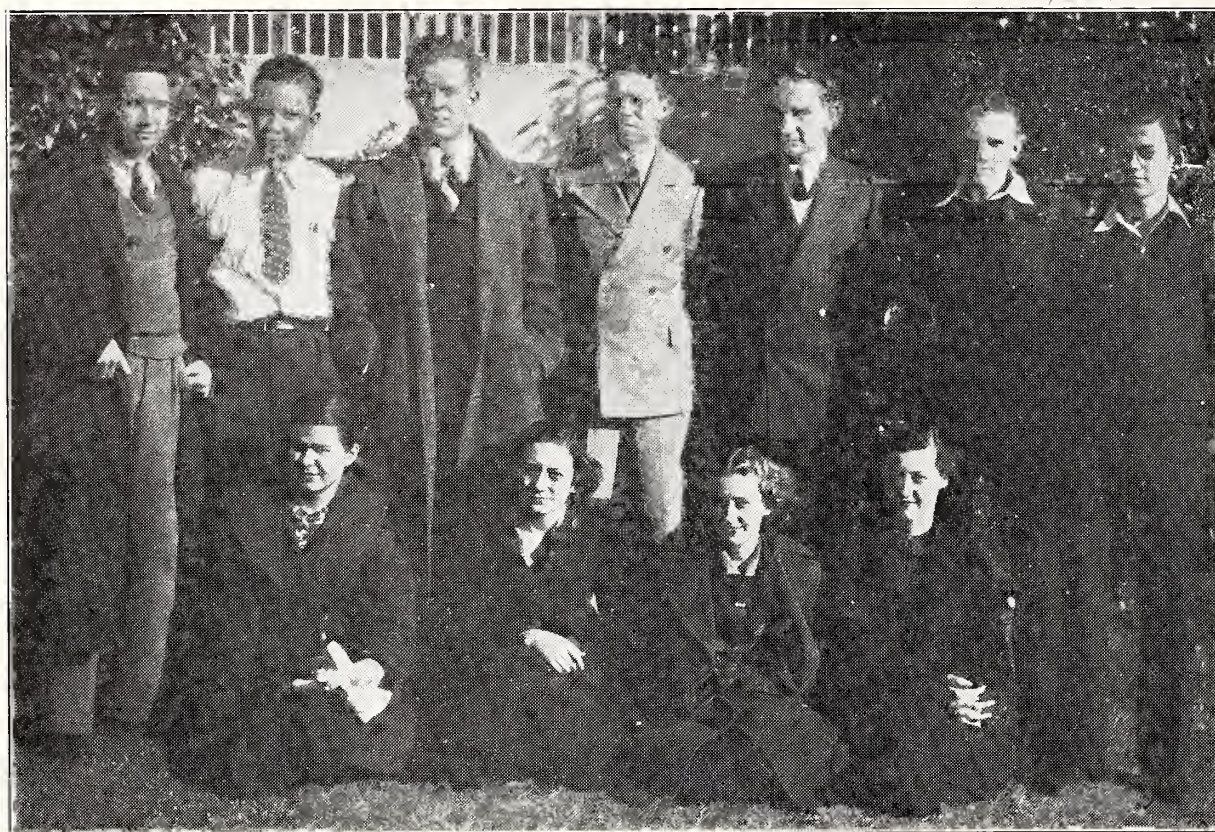

Eighth Grade

A vital part of the junior high school is the eighth grade whose one hundred twenty-two members have been guided by Mrs. Maude Bowen, Miss Evelyn Buchanan, and T. C. Bryan. Every phase of school activity has been well-supported by this group.

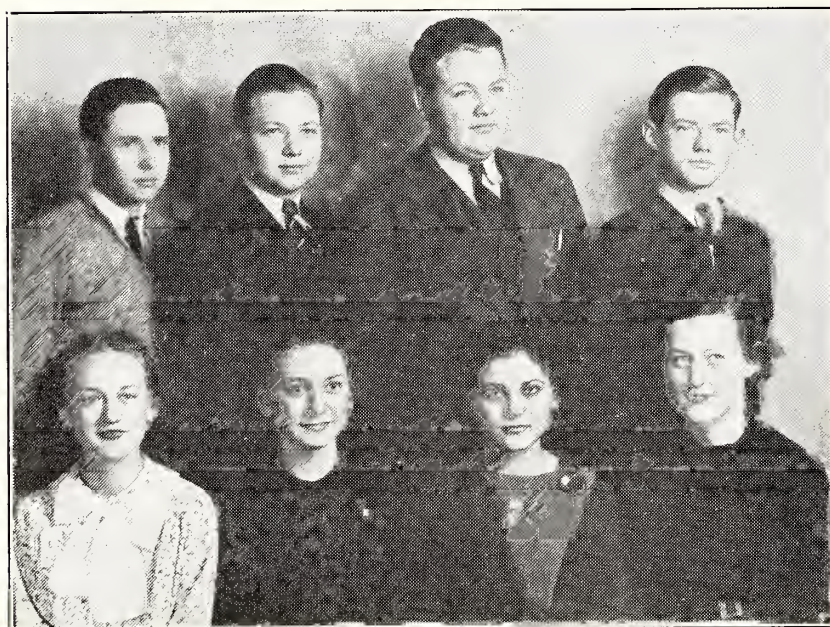

Seventh Grade

The seventh grade numbers one hundred forty-six, but only one hundred sixteen are housed in Greenville High. One group remained at the Training School this year. Miss Lucille Minton, Miss Mozelle Jones, and Leroy Bloomingdale directed the affairs of the seventh graders.

Charter Members of Quill and Scroll

Delegates to New York Convention

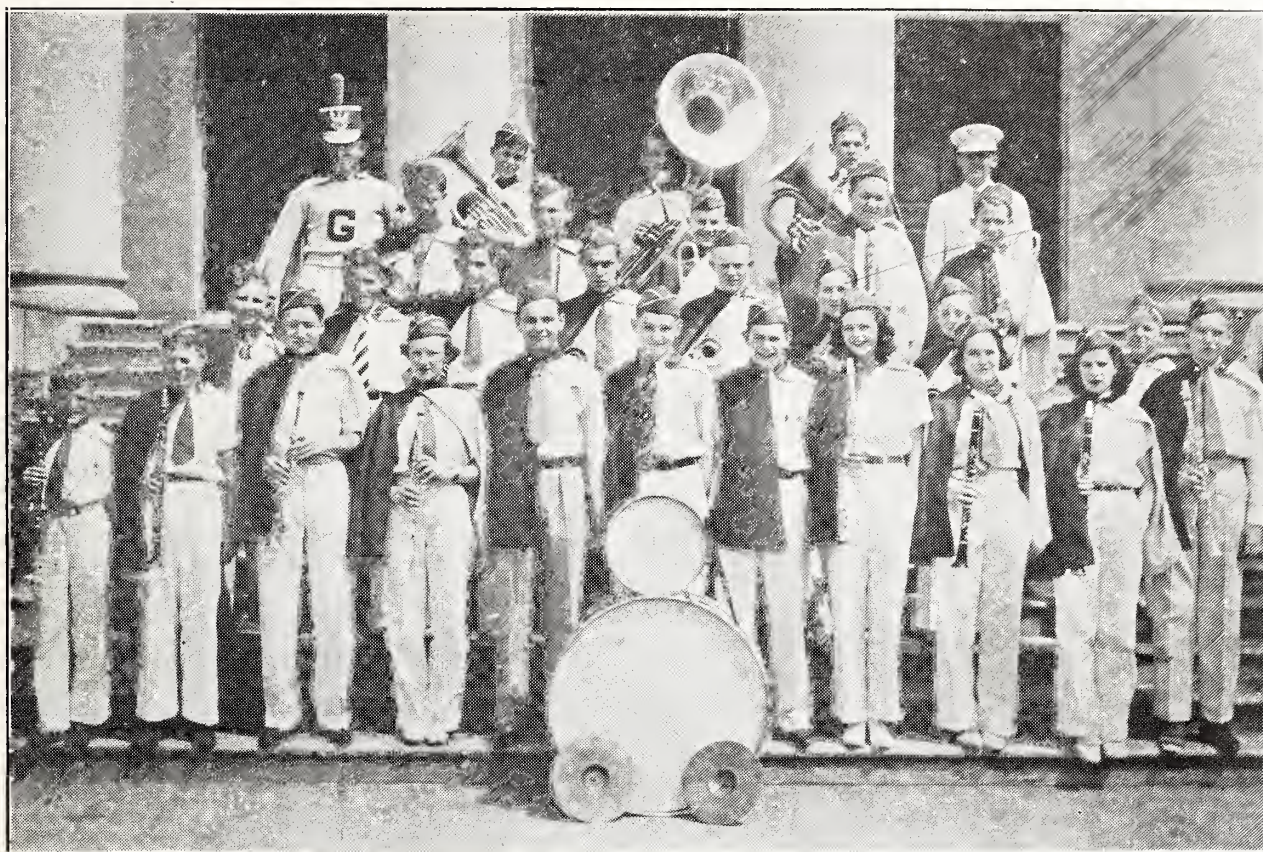

A local chapter of Quill and Scroll International Honor Society for High School Journalists, was installed in Greenville High, early in February. The journalists admitted into the "Green Lights" chapter on basis of their superior attainments in journalism follow: sitting: Edna May Turnage, Pauline Abeyounis, Rosa Lee McGowan, Ernestine Hobgood; standing: Earle Hellen, James Whitfield, William Harris, V. M. Mulholland, adviser, Thornton Ryan, Carl Pierce, and Allen Taylor.

At the left are delegates to the Columbia Scholastic Press Association convention, held in New York, March 11, 12, and 13. (Junius Goodwin, delegate, was unable because of illness to appear in the picture.) At this convention Green Lights was awarded a first place honor rating along with twelve other schools throughout the nation of the same classification.

Greenville High Band

Greenville High School Mixed Chorus

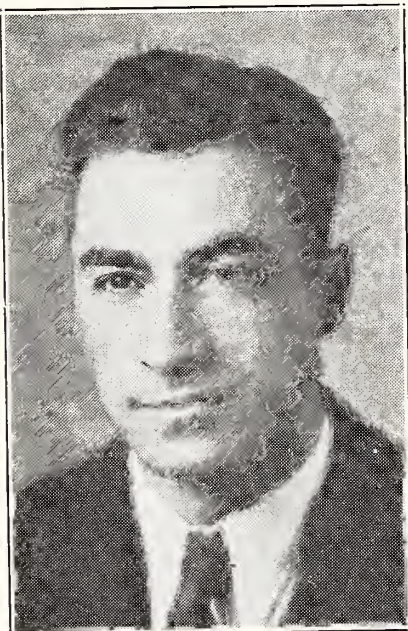

The Green Phantom Football Squad of 1936

The Green Phantoms' football team defeated Ahoskie, Morehead City, Tarboro, Kinston, and Farmville during the 1936 season. Games were dropped to New Bern, Washington, and Wilson. The Phantoms scored 106 points while their opponents scored 60. Wilson scored 34 points, more than half of these. Harold Forbes, fullback, led the scoring for the Greenies, making a total of 33 points.

Herman Dally of Muncie, Indiana, coached the Phantoms during the 1936 season. Mr. Dally, a newcomer to Greenville, enjoyed a successful season, winning five of the eight games played.

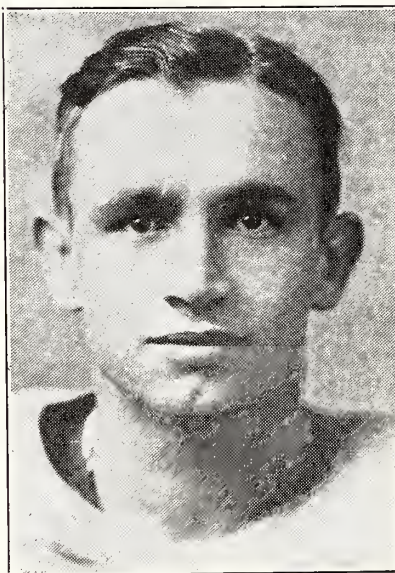

Leroy Bloomingdale of Huntington, Pennsylvania, a newcomer also, assisted Mr. Dally in coaching the Phantoms.

LEROY BLOOMINGDALE

BERNICE ELLERS

Phantom Basketball Squad of 1937

CARL PIERCE

By virtue of defeating every class A basketball team in the East two times, the Greenville High School Phantoms were declared Eastern champions. In the state-wide contest at Chapel Hill, High Point defeated the Greenies decisively. Reynolds May coached the Phantoms during the 1937 season. George Lautares, forward and DuBose Simpson, center, were high scorers with 128 points and 127 points respectively.

Carl Pierce, left and George Lautares, right, veteran forwards, were mainstays of the Phantom team throughout the season. Lautares was high scorer for the Greenies with a total of one hundred and twenty-eight points. Both Pierce and Lautares played excellent ball during their high school careers, three years of which they were varsity players in football, baseball as well as basketball. Each is planning to enter Duke.

GEORGE LAUTARES

Girls' Basketball Squad of 1937

After winning over half of their scheduled games, the girls' basketball team held an intramural tournament in which the Junior class team was victorious. Miss Corinna Mial, French and physical education teacher, coached the girls' team. Madoline Woolard was captain.

Phantom Baseball Squad of 1937

The Phantom baseball nine, coached by Leroy Bloomingdale, won five games this season and lost five. Victories were obtained over Fayetteville, Rocky Mount, twice, Kinston and Raleigh. Eight of the games played were Class A games.

"The G. H. S. Prevaricator"

Volume II

Edited by I. Know Tewmuchovitch

Number I

George Lautares and Leon Meadows, bosom pals of E. C. T. C., have just accepted faculty positions at before-said school. Their duties are to entertain girl students while off class. It is said that both are going over big.

Carl Pierce has entered Johns Hopkins Hospital for a thorough examination to determine his true ancestral blood strains. Even his best friends are very doubtful, this being the reason for Mr. Pierce undergoing this examination.

Virginia Bradshaw, former siren of G. H. S., and Charles ("Perk") Gaskins, handy man of several households, have formally announced their intention of sacred matrimony. The announcement has been pending upon the arrival of Miss Bradshaw's brother who will be present to see that all arrangements are carried out to completion.

Miss Mary L. Horne, prima donna of G. H. S. in 1937, gave a most gracious voice concert last evening. A ton-tested brace was used under the stage to prevent its breaking under the weight and volume of Miss Horne's troupe.

Lib Gates seems to have accomplished her fondest desire which has been to win the heart of the only and greatest DuBose Simpson. I wonder if she likes it so much now?

We have just received word that James Clark, former G. H. S. student and now star dash man at E. C. T. C. broke the world's record for the 100 yard dash and the 220 yard dash at the recent statewide meet held at the South's largest stadium recently erected at Stokes.

Chairman of School Board

James L. Little, chairman of the school board of the city of Greenville since 1919, has always advocated a progressive school program. In Greenville and Pitt county his name is a synonym for honor and integrity.

"The G. H. S. Prevaricator"--Continued--

Wavy-hair's latest enthusiast, Edward Conway, has been making weekly visits to a reputable beauty parlor to have his lustrous "yaller" hair waved. The glee club foots the bills.

Jack Foley, high-powered, slick tongue Romeo of Greenville high has spread his web around the beautiful and most innocent Elizabeth Gates. Miss Gates has completely lost her heart to the dashing young Don Juan.

Betty Fleischmann, ex-chorine of the Follies Bergere, has returned to G. H. S. to assume her duties as dramatic instructor. Miss Fleischmann has also written several articles on the "Philosophy of Life."

"Baru" Bridges has announced that he will sign a contract with M. G. M. for several jungle hero pictures. Bridges has made quite a name for himself with his very original monkey actions.

Mrs. Luther Herring created a panic in the library last week when she raised one of the ever-closed windows. Several pupils were reported awakened by the rush of fresh air.

Mac Hicks, and the rest of the tuxedo boys, reported their industrial arts project missing. After much hard work they had built a portable bar and had furnished it with all the popular brands. Mr. Field has been absent since the disappearance.

George Clark, Jr., G. H. S. sheriff proved his inability to fill his duties recently when he failed to apprehend the office and cafeteria thief. His only evidence was a few cigarette butts, a picture of Fannie C., a blue overcoat and the imprint of an extra large hand.

The notorious Wells boys, who stole the headline in last issue, are again on the rampage. Jap Davis, Wilson lad, laid brother Jimmie among the daisies, last fall. The remaining clan is out for blood.

Mulholland, the magician did a vanishing act at the Junior-Senior. He and faculty member E. B. weren't seen around much during or after intermission. The journalism class has often seen "things" vanish.

By breeding a pointer and a setter bird dog T. C. Bryan, local dog enthusiast has created a new type of hunter. He calls the new breed pointsetties.

Jack Forbes has accepted a job with the Keen Cutter Razor Company. His duties include testing out every new brand of razor. We are sure Jack and the company will benefit from this selection.

Mr. Mulholland, our principal and journalism class, donated 200 dollars to pay on the "Green Lights" debt. With part of the paid subscription he played a hot tip on War Admiral to win the Kentucky derby. We all are very happy he won. Incidentally Junius Goodwin and the other part haven't been seen since.

The Monogram club wishes to announce that on the thirty-first day of June all junior high students will be guests of the Goody Shop. Each student may buy twenty-five cents' worth of eats.

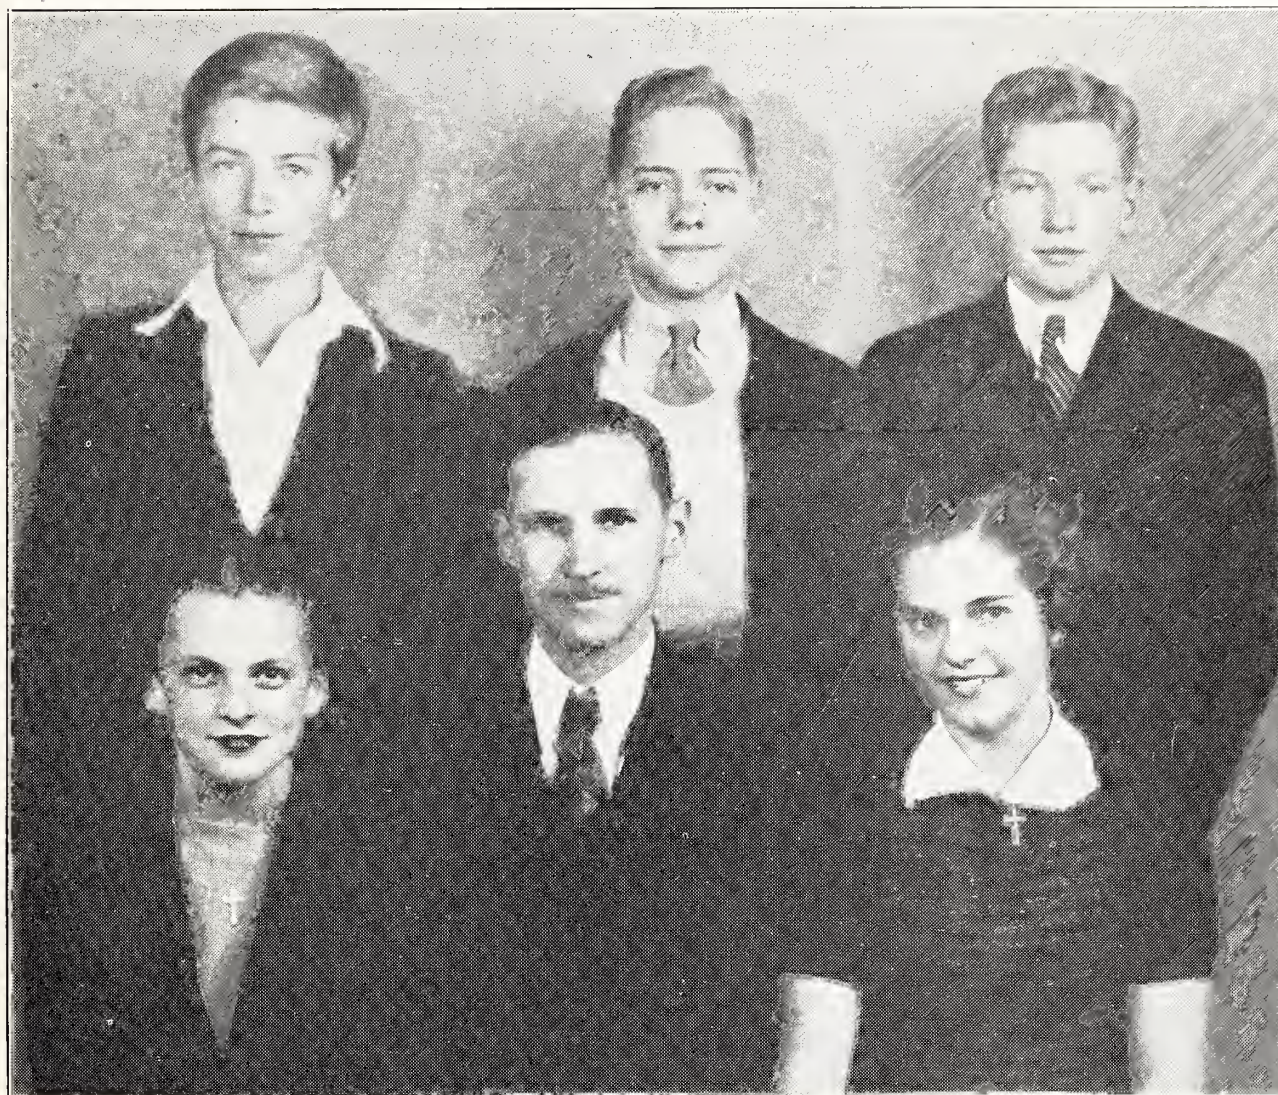

Smut Burkes, "mity" chemist, has perfected a rejuvenating drug which he calls Fountain of Youth Powder. Several members of the faculty are held under suspicion for trying to steal the drug. Smut, who used himself as subject for experimentation of the drug took a small dose of the newly-discovered powder and vanished in thin air.

Assignment Editor

Pauline Abeyounis, assignment editor of Green Lights, charter member of Quill and Scroll, "Entre Nous," "Let Us Act," and Beta club member, is one of the class of thirty-seven.

Aycock Triangular Debating Team

Sitting: Marjorie Spivey, T. C. Bryan, coach, Marjorie Sugg; standing: Louis Mayo, Joe Staton, John David Bridgers.

Under the direction of T. C. Bryan the Debating Club found itself quite active this year. A number of interesting debates were held at regular meetings of the club. Joe Staton served as president.

The outstanding achievement of the organization was its victories in the state-wide triangular contest. The affirmative team composed of Marjorie Spivey and Louis Mayo was considered the third best affirmative team in the state. The negative team was composed of Marjorie Sugg, and John David Bridgers. Gilbert Peele and Joe Staton were alternates.

Greenville High School Beta Club

Membership in the National Honorary Beta Club is based on one's scholastic work and leadership ability. The local club under the direction of Miss Evelyn Buchanan and V. M. Mulholland sponsored two programs early in the year on "Peace." The club has a total membership of forty-eight.

The "Let Us Act" Club

Home-Making Department

DEPARTMENT HEAD

Jessie Schnopp

The Home Economics Department has experienced considerable growth since the beginning of the year. With Miss Jessie Schnopp directing the affairs of the department, four unit kitchens were set up in the old foods laboratory. A home economics house on Fourth street was leased and furnished early in the year, and has since been the center of the home economics programs. Here have been held numerous banquets, teas, suppers, and parties. Each weekend four or more girls have used the apartment as a practice house.

ASSISTANT

Evelyn Rogers

Here, too, have been conducted by Miss Schnopp ten lessons on "The Education of the Pre-school Child." Around fifty adults attended these lessons.

Assisting Miss Schnopp in the department throughout the year has been Miss Evelyn Rogers whose work, however, has been largely confined to junior high school activities. With her assistance, the department has developed into one of the best in the state.

STUDENT ASSISTANT

Edna May Turnage

Edna May Turnage has been of valuable assistance in the department as Miss Schnopp's under-study and as competent news reporter for the department.

During the last three weeks of school, the home management house has been turned into a nursery school. Eight children from three to five have attended.

Superintendent

Junius H. Rose, Superintendent of the Greenville city schools, has been the guiding spirit in the Junior-Senior high school program throughout the 1936-37 school term. At the present he is serving as president of the Northeastern District Teachers Association. During the year Mr. Rose has been local chairman of the Seven County Public Forum.

S. I. P. A. Delegates

Inset are James Whitfield, Earle Hellen, Pauline Abeyounis, Madoline Woolard, and Ernestine Hobgood, delegates from Greenville high school at the twelfth annual convention of the Southern Interscholastic Press Association held at Washington and Lee University November 20-21.

At this convention Green Lights was awarded a gold medal and an All-Southern Honor rating. Competition was with schools throughout thirteen Southern states whose enrollments are below 800.

Charter Members of "Entre Nous".

"Entre Nous," the first French club in Greenville High, was organized early in the year with Miss Corinna Mial as adviser. Pauline Abeyounis, president, and other members of the club were admitted because of their superior work in French and their keen interest in learning to speak the language.
